

Vaṅgīsa

An Early Buddhist Poet

Pali text edited and translated by

John D. Ireland

Buddhist Publication Society
Kandy • Sri Lanka

The Wheel Publication No. 417/418

ISBN 955-24-0161-5

BPS Online Edition © (2011)

Digital Transcription Source: BPS Transcription Project

For free distribution. This work may be republished, reformatted, reprinted and redistributed in any medium. However, any such republication and redistribution is to be made available to the public on a free and unrestricted basis, and translations and other derivative works are to be clearly marked as such.

Contents

Abbreviations.....	2
Introduction.....	3
I. Departed (Nikkhantaṃ).....	7
II. Disliking (Aratīṃ).....	7
III. Despising the Well-behaved (Pesalā-atimaññanā).....	8
IV. Ānanda.....	9
V. Well-spoken (Subhāsītā).....	10
VI. Sāriputta.....	11
VII. The Invitation Ceremony (Pavāraṇā).....	11
VIII. More than a Thousand (Parosahassaṃ).....	12
IX. Overcoming (Abhibhuyya).....	12
X. Koṇḍañña.....	13
XI. Moggallāna.....	13
XII. Gaggarā.....	14
XIII. Vaṅgīsa (1).....	14
XIV. Vaṅgīsa (2).....	15
XV. Nigrodhakappa.....	16
Appendix
I. Non-Canonical Verses of Vaṅgīsa.....	19
II. Vaṅgīsa and the Vimānavatthu.....	19
Sesavatī's Mansion.....	20
Sirimā's Mansion.....	21

Abbreviations

A	Aṅguttara Nikāya
Ap	Apadāna
Be	Burmese-script edition of Th (Sixth Council)
Comy.	Commentary
D	Dīgha Nikāya
Dhp	Dhammapada
Ee	European edition of Thag (PTS)
EV I	Elders' Verses I (K.R. Norman's trans. of Th; PTS 1969)
It	Itivuttaka
M	Majjhima Nikāya
PTS	Pali Text Society
S	Saṃyutta Nikāya
Sn	Suttanipāta
Sn-a	Suttanipāta Commentary (Paramatthajotikā II)
Th	Theragāthā
Th-a	Theragāthā Commentary (Paramatthadīpanī)
Ud	Udāna
Vism	Visuddhimagga
Vv	Vimānavatthu

(All references are to the PTS editions of Pāli texts unless indicated otherwise.)

Introduction

The Theragāthā, the Verses of the Elders, is a work found in the Khuddaka Nikāya of the Sutta Piṭaka of the Pali Canon. As its name indicates, this is a collection of verses ascribed to various elder monks, mostly celebrating their attainment of arahatship. As with a number of other works in the Pali Canon, such as the Aṅguttara Nikāya and the Itivuttaka, the Theragāthā is divided into sections (nipāta) with progressively increasing numbers of verses. It begins with a section of single verses, then continues with pairs, triplets, and so forth. In the later sections this system breaks down and the number of verses which the poems actually contain only approximate to the number of the section.

The present work is a translation accompanying the original Pali text of the final and longest section of the Theragāthā, the Mahānipāta or “Great Section.” This is a self-contained anthology of fourteen poems with seventy-one verses, composed by a single elder, the Venerable Vaṅḡisa. Although not indicated in the text, the various occasions for the composition and recitation of these poems is to be found in the commentary. These in turn are a summary of the information supplied by the Vaṅḡisa-saṃyutta of the Saṃyutta Nikāya, where we find a parallel version of these poems embedded in a series of short suttas giving the circumstances of their composition. Interestingly, the two versions of the poems are not identical, though the differences are mostly slight. They consist mainly of dialectical variants from a time when Pali was an oral literature being collected from the several dialects of Māgadhī, the actual spoken language of that region of Northern India in which the Buddha and his early followers lived and preached the Dhamma.

The author of these poems, the Venerable Vaṅḡisa, was designated by the Buddha as the foremost of his disciples with respect to spontaneity of speech (paṭibhānavantānaṃ, A I 24). This gift is evidently a reference to the Parosahassa Sutta (S I 192–93) where, after reciting a poem (No. VIII of the translation), the Buddha asked Vaṅḡisa whether it had been devised by him beforehand or had occurred to him “on the spot” (ṭhānaso va taṃ paṭibhanti). When Vaṅḡisa affirmed the latter, the Buddha invited him to compose some more verses, and the result was the next poem (No. IX).

Apart from what we can glean from the poems themselves and the suttas of the Vaṅḡisa-saṃyutta, we know very little about the Venerable Vaṅḡisa himself. The commentary (Th-a III 180–81) says he was a brahmin by birth and that, prior to meeting the Buddha, he made a living by tapping the skulls of deceased people and telling thereby where the owners had been reborn. The Buddha tested him by presenting him with several skulls, including that of an arahat. He was successful with his first few guesses, but when he came to the arahat’s skull he was mystified, for an arahat is not reborn anywhere. He decided to enter the Order to discover the secret. He was ordained by the Elder Nigrodhakappa and later became an arahat. The commentary adds that after composing some verses in praise of the Buddha he gained a reputation as a poet.

According to the Apadāna (Ap II 497) Vaṅḡisa was so called both because he was born in the country of Vaṅga (modern Bengal) and also because he was a “master (īsa) of the spoken word (vacana).” In Buddhist Sanskrit works, such as the Mahāvastu, his name appears unambiguously as Vāḡīśa, “Lord of Speech.” This is, of course, an assumed name and we do not know his actual personal name, as is common with individuals in this early Buddhist literature. “Lord of Speech,” or perhaps better, “Master of Words,” is an apt title for a poet.

The poems themselves give us the picture of a man of sensitive and artistic temperament who found it difficult to control his innate sensuality, manifest in his attachment to the opposite sex. He would have appreciated this passage from the Aṅguttara Nikāya: “They fetter him who has forgotten mindfulness, with gaze and smile, disordered dress, sweet blandishments ...” (A III 69). Furthermore, he was proud of his gift of poetic invention, but recognised this pride as a fault to be overcome (No. III). The sole reference in the poems to his life before he met the Buddha says only that he was obsessed by the poetic art (No. XIII). All of this tends to cast doubt on the authenticity of the bizarre tale of the skull-tapping brahmin. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary it is perhaps best to be noted as a curiosity. The importance of Vaṅḡisa lies in his talent as a poet, a gift that must have been nurtured and developed over a period of time before the present poems were composed. We might also conclude that for someone able to compose verse spontaneously, as Vaṅḡisa could, his output might well have been enormous. The few “religious” poems that have survived may be only a small fraction of an opus that is now lost forever.

After these preliminary remarks I ought to discuss some points arising from the poems themselves, but first I wish to make a general observation concerning the translation. My aim has been to convey the exact verbal meaning of the poems, and for this purpose I felt a literal prose translation would be more suitable than one in verse. Moreover, a verse translation could be positively misleading if it made a pretence of conveying the “feel” of the original poems; hence also the decision to reproduce the Pali text alongside the translation. In recent decades much scholarly work has been done in restoring and correcting the text of the Theragāthā and I took the opportunity to incorporate the results of such research into this edited version of Vaṅḡisa’s verses. I leave the assessment of Vaṅḡisa as a poet to those better qualified to judge. Pali metre and Indian poetics in general are difficult subjects of which the present translator has little knowledge.

My aim in both the text and the translation has been to adhere as closely as possible to what was originally intended by the poet and to the meaning understood by his contemporaries. With this in view the translation occasionally departs from the interpretations of particular words and phrases proposed by the (later) commentaries. For instance, in v.1221 we find the term maggajina. The commentary interprets this as “a path-victor” or “conqueror (by means) of the path.” In the Cunda Sutta (Sn 83–90) maggajina is the first of the four kinds of samaṇa (ascetic) listed there. According to the commentary, “One who has overcome all defilements by means of the path is called a path-victor” (Sn-a I 162). However, as K.R. Norman has pointed out, the suffix -jina is unlikely to mean “conqueror” here, but was a dialect form from Skt. jñā (to know). Hence it is probable that the commentary is mistaken and that the word originally meant “a path-knower.” I have translated it in this way on the assumption that this was what Vaṅḡisa himself intended by the expression.

Another innovation is my translation of the term puthujjana as “outsiders” (vv. 1217, 1271). This term is usually translated “ordinary persons,” “worldlings,” “manyfolk,” etc., taking puthu in its sense of “numerous,” “various” (= Vedic pr̥thu). However, another meaning of puthu is “separate,” “apart” (= Vedic pr̥thak). Although this sense was deemed inappropriate for puthujjana by earlier translators and the PTS Dictionary, there is no real reason why it could not be so understood. The term refers to those people who are apart from, separate from, those in possession of the Dhamma of the noble ones (ariya), the Buddha and his disciples. The commentaries use puthujjana to refer to anyone and everyone who has not yet reached at least the path of stream-entry; thereafter they become noble disciples (ariya-sāvaka) and lose their designation as puthujjana. It is possible, however, that the term was originally used in a still more restricted sense, as referring to those incapable (abhabbo) of understanding the Dhamma, in contrast to the vinñū (wise, intelligent persons) who could do so when it was taught to them. Being apart from Dhamma, the puthujjana are established in what is not-Dhamma (adhamma or unrighteousness). They are unable to relate to the Buddha’s Teaching because they are attached to and blinded by the many wrong and speculative views that are at variance with the Dhamma.

I decided to use “Fortunate One” as a translation of bhagavā (bhagavantu). This seems to be closer to what was intended than the common rendering “Blessed One,” which could give rise to the query, “Blessed by whom?” Again, “Lord” or even “Exalted One” is suggestive of dominance over others by a god-like being, which is surely not intended here. All such renderings have strong theistic overtones and so can be misleading. In Hinduism bhagavān is used as a term for God, and thus in that context “Lord,” e.g. “Lord Krishna,” is appropriate.

In translating Vaṅḡisa’s verses my guiding principle has been to leave as few words as possible untranslated. With this aim “monk” is used for bhikkhu and “god” for deva, words which I had left in the original Pali in an earlier translated work. I decided to retain Dhamma and Tathāgata, which are generally held to elude satisfactory rendering into English. But the occurrence of the word nāga in v.1240 became an exception to the rule. One meaning of nāga is “bull elephant.” Nāga is used as an epithet of the Buddha and his arahat disciples (see also v.1279), and I had first thought to translate v.1240 thus: “You are called an elephant, Fortunate One....” However, in English, instead of suggesting the intended feelings of reverence and awe, on initial encounter this might well be taken in a pejorative sense (of ungainliness, clumsiness); hence I decided to leave it untranslated. In Th 691–704 various attributes of the Buddha are equated with parts of the elephant—feet, tusks, trunk, and so forth. The word nāga is also used for the serpent (cobra) and a class of semi-divine beings, depicted in art as half-human and half-snake; perhaps it originally referred to certain indigenous tribal peoples who worshipped the cobra. A nāga cult still exists in India today.

The subject matter of the poems is diverse. The first four poems show Vaṅḡsa articulating his inner struggle to overcome various failings and elementary obstacles: sensual thoughts, doubt, attachment, views, pride and conceit, ways of thinking not to be entertained by one who has gone forth into homelessness. Foremost among these failings is sensual desire, which arises through unguarded contact with desirable sights, sounds, etc. In the first poem these objects of desire are conceived as devices of Māra, the Evil One, to overpower the mind and prevent progress upon the path. The fourth poem shows how arisen sensual desires can be extinguished and dispelled by appropriate attitudes and meditation practices. In this latter poem it may be questioned whether it is actually the Venerable Ānanda who is here addressed as “Gotama” or the Buddha himself. However, there is no problem if we understand that Vaṅḡsa’s query is being answered by the Buddha, whose word was memorised and transmitted through his disciple Ānanda.

The fifth poem is unique in being a verse summary of a sermon by the Buddha on truth as the “well-spoken word.” This poem is also to be found in the Suttanipāta (Sn 451–54), and the fact that the three versions hardly differ may indicate that it enjoyed wide popularity. The sixth is the first of three sketches of the Buddha’s disciples. Here it is Sāriputta; the others are Koṇḍañña (No. X) and Mahāmoggallāna (No. XI). This poem gives a rare glimpse of Sāriputta as a skilled teacher and speaker able to captivate the monks with his pleasant voice.

“All are the Fortunate One’s sons ...” (v.1237): that the Buddha’s arahat disciples are regarded as his “sons” is a recurrent idea in the Theragāthā and elsewhere. In the Itivuttaka the Buddha says: “Monks, ... you are my own legitimate sons, born from my mouth, born of Dhamma, fashioned by Dhamma, heirs of Dhamma, not heirs of material things” (It 100). In v.1248 Vaṅḡsa calls the Elder Koṇḍañña “the Awakened One’s heir” and Nigrodhakappa in v.1279 “a true son of the nāga” (i.e. of the Buddha). The idea is extended in Th 536, where Kālundāyīn actually addresses Suddhodana, the Buddha’s natural father, as his grandfather! It is the tradition that the Buddha had a son named Rāhula who became a monk. But the Venerable Rāhula found in the Sutta Piṭaka, when called the Buddha’s son, has no special claim to that position over and above that of any other disciple. In the suttas Rāhula is portrayed as the ideal novice monk, eager for instruction in the Teaching.

Poems VIII and IX extol the Buddha and his Teaching and in v.1241 the poet actually refers to himself by name. No. XII consists of just a single verse praising the Buddha. No. XIII is Vaṅḡsa’s declaration of aññā, the attainment of final knowledge or arahatship. Up to this point the differences between the versions of the poems in the Theragāthā and the Vaṅḡsa-saṃyutta have been quite minor. But the verses of this poem are so different from those of the Vaṅḡsa Sutta in the Saṃyutta Nikāya that it should be regarded as a separate poem. It is therefore inserted here as Poem XIV for the sake of completeness and for purposes of comparison. Although the subject matter of both poems is the same, the Saṃyutta version is half the length of the other, with only five stanzas, in contrast to the ten of the Theragāthā version. Circumstantial evidence suggests the shorter poem was the original, which was later expanded, either by Vaṅḡsa himself or someone else, to create the longer poem.

The Vaṅḡsa Sutta concludes the Saṃyutta collection and is in keeping with what has gone before, in as much as none of the poems exceed five stanzas in length. Also the Vaṅḡsa-saṃyutta is found in the first and probably the most ancient division of the Saṃyutta Nikāya, the Sagāthāvagga. In contrast, the longer poem comes almost at the end of the Theragāthā and is followed by yet one more, the final and inordinately long Nigrodhakappa poem of seventeen stanzas, which concludes this entire collection. It is known that the Theragāthā grew over a long period of time and received additional material even up to the time of Emperor Asoka. It is therefore more than likely that these final two poems came into existence after the Saṃyutta anthology was finalised.

How the longer poem was constructed from the shorter is best seen by analysing each of the Pali gāthā (stanzas) into their constituent four pāda (metrical units). Thus the first three stanzas of the shorter poem were expanded to five by the insertion of extra pāda. All the original pāda were retained, but not in the same order. Stanzas six and seven of the longer poem, referring to the Four Noble Truths, have nothing corresponding to them in the shorter poem and are therefore new material. Three pāda from the last two stanzas of the shorter poem were discarded (fourth stanza, pāda 3; fifth stanza, pāda 1 and 2), but the rest utilised to make the final three stanzas of the longer poem.

The final poem in this anthology (No. XV), as already indicated, is missing from the Saṃyutta collection. However, a corresponding version is found at Sn 343–58, called there variously the Vaṅgīsa Sutta, Kappa Sutta, or Nigrodhakappa Sutta. Apart from its much greater length, this poem differs from the preceding poems in a number of other ways. The fact that it directly addresses the Buddha and is in a more ornate, even extravagant style sets it apart from the simpler, unvarnished verse of the earlier poems. Expressions such as that in v.1266 referring to “the thousand-eyed Sakka,” are characteristic of a late period of Pali composition. And indeed, the comparison of the Buddha’s voice to the honking of a goose (v.1270) is a device suggestive of the highly ornate poetry of a much later age. That the elder is variously called Nigrodhakappa, Kappa, Kappiya, Kappāyana, is, of course, to conform to the requirements of the metre.

Although the Nigrodhakappa poem is ostensibly a request to the Buddha for information about the attainment of the deceased elder, Vaṅgīsa’s teacher, the manner and persistence of the “urge to speak Dhamma” and other such expressions point to a deeper meaning. An underlying idea is that the Buddha alone, when proclaiming the Dhamma, is capable of producing a profound effect upon his hearers (the literal meaning of sāvaka). He is able to establish them on the noble path of the sotāpanna, etc., at least those who are ready to receive it, by the Dhamma-words issuing forth through his speech and apparently without any prior practice on the part of the recipients. This is a special gift exercised by the Buddha alone and not by his disciples. Although this idea is not taken up to any extent by the Theravāda, which stresses the human side of the Buddha, it was a factor affecting other Indian schools of Buddhism and the so-called Mahāyāna, which tended to emphasise the Buddha’s transcendental nature.

Both the Theragāthā and the first volume of the Saṃyutta Nikāya, where these verses are found, were first translated by Mrs. Rhys Davids under the respective titles Psalms of the Brethren (PTS 1913) and Kindred Sayings I (PTS 1917). The Theragāthā was re-translated more recently by K.R. Norman as Elders’ Verses I (PTS 1969). The present translator has relied heavily upon Norman’s erudite translation and his copious notes to the original Pali text.

I. Departed (Nikkhantaṃ)

As a new monk, recently gone forth, lustful passion was aroused in the Venerable Vaṅḡisa when he saw a number of women adorned in all their finery who had come to visit the monastery. He dispelled this lust, recording the experience in these verses:

1209. *nikkhantaṃ vata maṃ santaṃ agārasmānagāriyaṃ
vitakkā upadhāvanti pagabbhā kaṇhato ime.*

1209. Alas! Now that I have departed from home to the homeless state, these reckless thoughts from the Dark One¹ come upon me.

1210. *uggaputtā mahissāsā sikkhitā dalhadhammino
samantā parikireyyuṃ sahasaṃ apalāyinaṃ.*

1210. Mighty warriors, great archers, trained, steady bowmen, one thousand fearless men, might surround me on all sides.

1211. *sace pi ettakā² bhīyyo āgamissanti itthiyo
n'eva maṃ byādhayissanti dhamme svamhi³ patiṭṭhito.*

1211. Even if more women than these will come,⁴ they will not cause me to waver, for I am firmly established in the teaching.

1212. sakkhiṃ⁵ hi me sutāṃ etaṃ buddhassādiccabandhuno nibbānagamaṇaṃ maggaṃ tattha me nirato mano.

1212. In his presence I heard from the Awakened One, the Kinsman of the Sun, of this path leading to nibbāna; it is there that my mind is attached.

1213. evaṇ⁶ ce maṃ viharantaṃ pāpima upagacchasi tathā maccu karissāmi na me maggaṃ udikkhasi.⁷

1213. Evil One, while I am living thus, if you assail me, so shall I act, O Death, that you will not see my path.

II. Disliking (Aratiṃ)

While staying at Ālavī the Venerable Vaṅḡisa's teacher, the Elder Nigrodhakappa, after returning from the alms round, remained in seclusion for long periods. On one occasion, when discontent arose in the mind of the Venerable Vaṅḡisa and his mind was tormented by lust, he composed these verses to reprove himself and to dispel the conflicting emotions that harassed him:

1214. *aratiṃ ratiṃ ca pahāya sabbaso gehasitaṃ ca vitakkaṃ
vanathaṃ na kareyya kuhiñci nibbanathāvanatho sa hi bhikkhu.⁸*

¹The Dark One (kaṇha) is another name for Māra the Evil One or Death (maccu, or maccurāja, the King of Death) in his aspect as Kāmadeva, the love god, the Indian Cupid. Like Cupid he also shoots arrows of passion at his victims. See Dhṃp 46: "plucking out the flower-tipped arrows of Māra, let him go beyond the sight of the King of Death." Hence also the last line of the poem: "You will not see my path."

²S: ettato bhīyo.

³Reading svamhi = so amhi suggested by Norman.

⁴The simile here is somewhat obscure. Th-a explains that whereas an archer can shoot only one arrow at a time, a woman assails all five senses simultaneously.

⁵Ee reads sakiṃ; Be and S read sakkhi; Norman suggests adverbial accusative sakkhiṃ.

⁶I adopt the reading of S and other eds. of Th. Ee has evam evaṃ.

⁷Be and S read pi dakkhasi for udikkhasi.

⁸I follow Norman's proposed amendment.

1214. Entirely giving up disliking and liking, and the thinking associated with the life of a householder, one should not have craving for anything. He indeed is a monk who is wholly without craving.

1215. *yam idha pathaviñ ca vehāsaṃ rūpagataṃ jagatogadhaṃ kiñci
parijiyati sabbam aniccaṃ evaṃ samecca caranti mutattā.*⁹

1215. Whatever there is here of form, inhabiting the earth and the sky, immersed in the world,¹⁰ all is impermanent and decaying. So understanding, the wise live their lives.¹¹

1216. *upadhīsu janā gadhitāse diṭṭhasute paṭighe ca mute ca ettha vinodaya chandam anejo yo h'ettha na lippati taṃ munim āhu.*¹²

1216. Regarding objects of attachment, people are greedy for what is to be seen and heard and touched and otherwise experienced.¹³ Being unmoved, dispel desire for them, for they call him a sage who does not cling to them.

1217. atha¹⁴ saṭṭhisitā savitakkā puthujjanatāya adhammaniviṭṭhā na ca vaggagat'assa¹⁵ kuhiñci no pana duṭṭhullaḡāhi¹⁶ sa bhikkhu.

1217. Then, caught in the sixty,¹⁷ full of (speculative) thoughts, because of being outsiders,¹⁸ they are established in wrong teaching. But one who is a monk would not take up a sectarian viewpoint, much less seize upon what is bad.

1218. *dabbo cirarattasamāhito akuhako nīpako apihālu
santaṃ padam ajjhagamā muni paṭiccaparinibbuto kañkhati kālaṃ.*

1218. Intelligent, for a long time composed (of mind), not deceitful, wise, not envious, the sage has experienced the peaceful state, depending on which, attained to quenching, he awaits his time.¹⁹

III. Despising the Well-behaved (Pesalā-atimaññanā)

On another occasion, full of conceit because of his gift for composing extemporaneous verse, the Venerable Vaṅḡisa caught himself despising the other monks who were not so gifted. Repenting these thoughts, he composed the following poem:

1219. *mānaṃ pajahassu Gotama mānapathañ ca jahassu asesam mānapathasmim samucchito vippaṭisār'ahuvā cirarattaṃ.*²⁰

⁹I read mutattā with Be and S, as against Ee muttantā.

¹⁰*Jagatogadhaṃ*, literally, "earth-plunged." Th-a whatever is mundane (lokiya), included in the three realms of being, conditioned.

¹¹Literally, "wander about."

¹²I read with Th-a (text) and S: taṃ munim āhu.

¹³*Muta* is a term for the other two senses, smell and taste, and can also refer to mind, the inner sense.

¹⁴I read atha with Th-a, Be, and S, as against Ee's aṭṭha.

¹⁵I follow Th-a, Be, and S.

¹⁶We should read, with S and other eds., duṭṭhulla- for Ee's padulla-.

¹⁷The cryptic expression "caught in the sixty" (saṭṭhisitā) seems to be an allusion to the sixty-two speculative views of the Brahmajāla Suttanta (D 1). Ven. Bhikkhu Bodhi points out (in a private communication) that the key to understanding this expression is found in the sutta itself, in the statement, sabbe te imeh'eva dva-saṭṭhiyā vatthūhi antojālikatā ettha sitā... "All these (ascetics and brahmins) are caught inside the net with its sixty-two divisions..." (D I 45).

¹⁸On the term puthujjana see Introduction, pp.4–5.

¹⁹The "peaceful state" is Nibbāna, the extinguishing of the three "fires" of greed, hate, and delusion.

²⁰I follow the reading proposed by Norman.

1219. Abandon conceit, Gotama,²¹ get rid of the way of conceit completely. Because of being infatuated by the way of conceit, for a long time you have been remorseful.

1220. makkhena makkhitā pajā mānahatā nirayaṃ <pa>patanti²² socanti janā cirarattaṃ mānahatā nirayaṃ upapannā.

1220. Soiled by contempt (for others), destroyed by conceit, people fall into hell. Persons destroyed by conceit grieve for a long time upon being reborn in hell.

1221. na hi socati bhikkhu kadāci maggajino sammāpaṭipanno kittiṃ ca sukhaṃ c'anutthoti dhammaso'ti tam āhu tathattaṃ.

1221. A monk never grieves who is a knower of the path,²³ one who has practised it properly. He experiences fame and happiness; truthfully they call him “a seer of Dhamma.”

1222. tasmā akhilo'dha padhānavā²⁴ nīvaraṇāni pahāya visuddho mānaṃ ca pahāya asesam vijjāy'antakaro samitāvī.

1222. Therefore be without barrenness²⁵ here (in this world), energetic, purified by abandoning the hindrances. Having completely abandoned conceit, be an ender (of suffering) through knowledge and become one who dwells at peace.

IV. Ānanda

Once, soon after his ordination, Vaṅgīsa accompanied the Venerable Ānanda on a visit to the house of one of the king's ministers. A number of women of the household came and paid reverence to the elder, asked questions, and listened to his preaching. But at the sight of these women sensual desire was aroused in Venerable Vaṅgīsa, which he immediately confessed to the Venerable Ānanda. He recorded the incident in this poem:²⁶

(Vaṅgīsa:)

1223. *kāmarāgena ḍayhāmi cittaṃ me pariḍayhati
sādhū nibbāpanaṃ brūhi anukampāya Gotama.*

1223. “I burn with sensual desire, my mind is enflamed (with passion). Out of pity please tell me, Gotama,²⁷ the effective extinguishing of it.”

(Ānanda:)

1224. saññāya vipariyesā cittaṃ te pariḍayhati nimittaṃ parivajjehi subhaṃ rāgūpasamhitam. (A) 1224. “Your mind is enflamed because of distorted perception. Shun the aspect of beauty associated with passion. (A)

1224. saṅkhāre parato passa dukkhato mā ca attato nibbāpehi mahārāgaṃ mā ḍayhittha punappunaṃ. (B)

²¹Vaṅgīsa here addresses himself as “Gotama,” for as a disciple of the Buddha he regards himself as one of the Buddha's sons, a member of his spiritual family.

²²Norman suggests papatanti to regularize the cadence.

²³Maggaḥjina. See Introduction.

²⁴We should read padhānavā with Th-a, Be, and S, in place of Ee's amānavā.

²⁵*Akhīla*, literally, “not barren.” There are five things that hinder and prevent one from energetically pursuing the path, namely, doubt about the Teacher, the Dhamma, the Sangha, and the training, and resentment against one's companions in the holy life (M I 101). These things are called “mental barrennesses” (cetokhīla); a mind obsessed by them is likened to a piece of land that is of poor quality, with hard and stony soil, difficult to plough and producing no worthwhile crop.

²⁶At Vism I,103, the background to the verses is related differently. There it is said that lust arose in the Elder Vaṅgīsa when he saw an attractive woman while on alms round.

²⁷Here it is Ānanda, traditionally regarded as the Buddha's cousin, who is addressed as Gotama.

1224. “See constructions²⁸ as other, as painful, not as self, (and thus) extinguish strong passion; do not burn again and again. (B)²⁹

1225. asubhāya cittaṃ bhāvehi ekaggaṃ susamāhitaṃ sati kāyagatā ty atthu nibbidābahulo bhava.

1225. “Devote the mind, one-pointed and well-composed, to the contemplation of foulness.³⁰ Let mindfulness be directed towards the body and be full of disenchantment for it.

1226. animittaṃ ca bhāvehi mānānusayam ujjaḥa tato mānābhisamayā upasanto carissasi.

1226. “Contemplate the signless³¹ and cast out the underlying tendency to conceit. Then by the penetration of conceit you will go about at peace.”

V. Well-spoken (Subhāsītā)

These verses came to the Venerable Vaṅḡsa while he was listening to a talk delivered by the Buddha on the “well-spoken word.” Having received permission from the Teacher, he then recited this poem in his presence.³²

1227. tam eva vācaṃ bhāseyya yāy’attānaṃ na tāpaye pare ca na vihiṃseyya sā ve vācā subhāsītā.

1227. One should speak only that word by which one would not torment oneself nor harm others. That word is indeed well spoken.

1228. *piyavācam eva bhāseyya yā vācā paṭinanditā
yaṃ anādāya pāpāni paresaṃ bhāsate piyaṃ.*

1228. One should speak only pleasant words, words which are acceptable (to others). What one speaks without bringing evils to others is pleasant.

1229. saccaṃ ve amatā vācā esa dhammo sanantano sacce atthe ca dhamme ca āhu santo paṭiṭṭhitā.

1229. Truth is indeed the undying word; this is an ancient verity. Upon truth, the good say, the goal and the teaching are founded.³³

1230. *yaṃ buddho bhāsati³⁴ vācaṃ khemaṃ nibbānapattiyā
dukkhass’antakiriya sa ve vācānam uttamā.*

1230. The sure word the Awakened One speaks for the attainment of nibbāna, for making an end of suffering, is truly the best of words.

²⁸*Saṅkhāra*: all conditioned things comprised in the five aggregates.

²⁹This verse is not in Th, but is included in S. Th-a also includes it in text, but without comment, which suggests it is not included in Th’s version of the poem.

³⁰The contemplation of the thirty-two parts of the body to overcome passion. Cf. Vism VIII, 42–144; M I 57, etc.

³¹*Animittaṃ*. Th-a explains this as the distinguished contemplation of impermanence, because it pulls away the sign of permanence, etc.

³²The full sutta is at Sn pp.78–79 as well as at S I 188–89. Th includes only Vaṅḡsa’s verses, but not the Buddha’s verse.

³³ Th-a assumes that sacce (truth), atthe (goal), and dhamme are all locatives. Here, however, I follow Norman’s thesis that the verse was originally preserved in a Middle Indo-Aryan dialect in which the nominative singular ended in -e and was thus mistranslated into Pali. I take atthe and dhamme as originally nominatives. For a fuller discussion, see EV I, p.292.

³⁴S: bhāsate.

VI. Sāriputta

Verses spoken in praise of the Venerable Sāriputta:

1231. gambhīrapañño medhāvī maggāmaggassa kovido
Sāriputto mahāpañño dhammaṃ deseti bhikkhunaṃ.

1231. Of profound wisdom, intelligent, skilled in knowledge of the right and wrong path, Sāriputta of great wisdom teaches Dhamma to the monks.

1232. saṃkhittena pi deseti vitthārena pi bhāsati
*sālikāyeva nigghoso paṭibhānaṃ udiyyati.*³⁵

1232. He teaches in brief, he speaks with detailed explanation, his voice is (pleasing) like that of the mynah bird; he demonstrates readiness of speech.³⁶

1233. tassa taṃ desayantassa suṇantā madhuraṃ giraṃ sarena rajanīyena savanīyena vaggunā udaggacittā muditā sotaṃ odhenti bhikkhavo.

1233. Listening to his sweet utterance³⁷ while he is teaching with a voice that is captivating, pleasing, and lovely, the monks give ear, with minds elated and joyful.

VII. The Invitation Ceremony (Pavāraṇā)

Verses spoken in praise of the Buddha on an occasion of the Invitation Ceremony:³⁸

1234. ajja pannarase visuddhiyā bhikkhū pañcasatā samāgatā saṃyojanabandhanacchidā anīghā khīṇapunabbhavā isī.

1234. Today on the fifteenth (of the fortnight)³⁹ five hundred monks have gathered for the Ceremony of purification, cutters of fetters and bonds, untroubled, seers finished with renewed existence.

1235. cakkavattī yathā rājā amaccaparivārito
samantā anupariyeti sāgarantaṃ mahiṃ imaṃ

1236. evaṃ vijitasamgāmaṃ satthavāhaṃ anuttaraṃ
sāvakaṃ payirupāsanti tevijjā maccuhāyino.

1235–36. As a wheel-turning monarch, surrounded by his ministers, tours all around this ocean-girt earth, so do the disciples with the threefold knowledge, who have left death behind, attend upon the victor in battle, the unsurpassed caravan leader.

1237. sabbe bhagavato puttā palāp'etthaī⁴⁰ na vijjati
taṇhāsallassa hantāraṃ vande ādiccabandhunaṃ.

1237. All are the Fortunate One's sons; there is no chaff found here. I pay homage to the destroyer of the dart of craving, the Kinsman of the Sun.

³⁵*udiyyati* follows Be, but Th-a (text and lemma) and S read udīrayi.

³⁶Or, spontaneity; paṭibhāna is also the word used to describe Vaṅgīsa's gift of unpremeditated poetic invention.

³⁷Th-a says this is an attribute of the voice of the mynah bird.

³⁸The pavāraṇā ceremony is held at the end of the rainy-season retreat (vassa). At this ceremony each monk invites the others to reproach him for any misdeed he might have committed during the retreat.

³⁹The night of the full moon.

⁴⁰Reading palāp' with Th-a (text), Be, and S.

VIII. More than a Thousand (Parosahassaṃ)

A poem composed on the occasion of a Dhamma-talk concerning nibbāna, delivered by the Buddha to a large company of monks:

1238. *parosahassaṃ bhikkhūnaṃ sugataṃ payirupāsati
desentaṃ virajaṃ dhammaṃ nibbānaṃ akutobhayaṃ.*

1238. More than a thousand monks attend upon the Happy One as he is teaching the stainless Dhamma concerning nibbāna, where no fear can come from any quarter.

1239. *suṇanti dhammaṃ vimalaṃ⁴¹ sammāsambuddhadesitaṃ
sobhati vata sambuddho bhikkhusaṅghapurakkhato.*

1239. They hear the taintless Dhamma taught by the Fully Awakened One. The Awakened One is truly resplendent as he is revered by the community of monks.

1240. nāganāmo'si bhagavā isīnaṃ isisattamo mahāmegho va hutvāna sāvake abhivassasi.

1240. You are called a nāga,⁴² Fortunate One; of seers, you are the best of seers.⁴³ Like a great rain-cloud, you rain down upon the disciples.

1241. *divāvihārā nikkhamma satthudassanakamyatā
sāvako te mahāvīra pāde vandati Vaṅgiso.*

1241. Leaving his daytime abode, wishing to see the Teacher, your disciple Vaṅgisa pays homage at your feet, Great Hero.

IX. Overcoming (Abhibhuyya)

Further verses composed by the Venerable Vaṅgisa when the Buddha, after hearing the previous poem, invited him to speak more extemporaneous verses:⁴⁴

1242. ummagapathaṃ Mārassa abhibhuyya carati pabhijja khilāni taṃ passatha bandhanamuñcaṃ⁴⁵ asitaṃ va bhāgaso pavibhajja.

1242. Overcoming the devious ways and range of Māra, he walks (free), having broken up the things that make for barrenness of mind.⁴⁶ See him producing release from bonds, unattached, separating (the Teaching) into its constituent parts.⁴⁷

1243. *oghassa hi nittharaṇatthaṃ anekavihitaṃ <su->maggaṃ akkhāsi⁴⁸
tasmīñ ca amate akkhāte dhammasā ʿhitā asaṃhīrā.*

1243. He has shown the path in a variety of ways with the aim of guiding us across the flood. Since the undying has been shown (to them), the Dhamma-seers (are those who) stand immovable.

⁴¹Th-a (text), Be, and S read vimalaṃ in place of Ee's vipulaṃ and that should be adopted.

⁴²See Introduction, p.5.

⁴³Th-a offers two explanations of isisattamo: the best seer (uttamo isi) among the seers such as disciples and paccekabuddhas; and the seventh seer (sattamako isi) counting from the Buddha Vipassī. Almost certainly the former explanation is correct, sattama being the superlative of sat. The second explanation alludes to the idea that Gotama is the seventh of the Buddhas often mentioned in the Canon (see D II 2–7).

⁴⁴This poem actually has no separate title as it is included with the previous poem in the Parosahassa Sutta of the Vaṅgīsa-saṃyutta. However, it is obviously a separate piece.

⁴⁵The reading adopted is proposed by Norman in place of the established bandhanapamuñcakaraṃ.

⁴⁶See note 11 above.

⁴⁷Th-a explains this to mean that the Buddha teaches by analysing the doctrine by way of its constituents such as the four foundations of mindfulness, etc.

⁴⁸The addition of su is proposed by Norman to normalize the metre.

1244. *pajjotakaro ativijja sabbatthitīnam atikkamam addā
ñatvā ca sacchikatvā ca aggaṃ so desayi das'addhānaṃ.*⁴⁹

1244. The light-maker, having penetrated (the Dhamma), saw the overcoming of all standpoints.⁵⁰ Having understood and experienced it, he taught the topmost (Dhamma-teaching) to the five.⁵¹

1245. evaṃ sudesite dhamme ko pamādo vijānataṃ dhammaṃ tasmā <ti ha>⁵² tassa bhagavato sāsane appamatto sadā namassam anusikkhe.

1245. When the Dhamma has been thus well taught, what indolence could there be in those who know the Dhamma? Therefore, vigilant and ever revering, one should follow the training in the Fortunate One's dispensation.

X. Koṇḍañña

Verses composed on an occasion when the Elder Aññāta Koṇḍañña came to pay his respects to the Teacher:

1246. buddhānubuddho yo thero Koṇḍañño tibbanikkamo lābhī sukhavihārānaṃ vivekānaṃ abhiṇhaso.

1246. The Elder Koṇḍañña, strong in energy, who was enlightened after the Awakened One,⁵³ is repeatedly the obtainer of pleasurable abidings and seclusions.⁵⁴

1247. yaṃ sāvakena pattaḃbaṃ satthusāsanakārīnā sabb'assa taṃ anuppattaṃ appamattassa sikkhato.

1247. Whatever is to be attained by a disciple who does the instruction of the Teacher, all that has been attained by him, vigilant and disciplined.

1248. *mahānubhāvo tevijjo cetopariyakovido⁵⁵
Koṇḍañño buddhadāyādo pāde vandati satthuno.*

1248. Having great power and the threefold knowledge, skilled in knowing the thoughts of others, Koṇḍañña, the Awakened One's heir, pays homage at the Teacher's feet.

XI. Moggallāna

Verses in praise of the Elder Mahāmoggallāna:

1249. *naḡassa⁵⁶ passe āsīnaṃ muniṃ dukkhassa pāraguṃ
sāvakaṃ pariyupāsanti tevijjā maccuhāyino.*

1249. Disciples, possessors of the threefold knowledge who have left death behind, attend upon the sage seated on the mountain side, who has gone to the far shore beyond suffering.

⁴⁹I follow Th-a (text and lemma) in reading das'addhānaṃ. Although Ee and Be read dasaddhānaṃ (and S dasatthānaṃ), the gloss of Th-a (pañcavaggiyānaṃ) supports the reading adopted.

⁵⁰Th-a explains the "standpoints" as either the standpoints for views (see M I 135–36) or the standpoints for consciousness (see D III 228, 253).

⁵¹*Das'addhānaṃ*. Literally, "to the half-ten," i.e. five. Th-a says this refers to the group of five monks, headed by Koṇḍañña, to whom the First Sermon was addressed.

⁵²Norman suggests adding ti ha to normalize the metre.

⁵³The first half of this verse is also to be found among Koṇḍañña's own verses (Th 679). Koṇḍañña was the very first of the Buddha's followers to awaken to the Dhamma.

⁵⁴There are three kinds of seclusion (viveka): physical, mental, and complete freedom from defilements. The pleasurable abidings are the four meditative absorptions (jhāna).

⁵⁵S: - pariyāya-.

⁵⁶Ee's nāḡassa is clearly an error and naḡassa should be adopted.

1250. cetasā anupariyeti Moggallāno mahiddhiko cittaṃ nesaṃ samanvesaṃ vippamuttaṃ nirūpadhiṃ.

1250. Moggallāna, of great supernormal powers, encompasses (their minds) with his mind, seeking their minds, completely freed, without attachments.⁵⁷

1251. evaṃ sabbaṅgasampannaṃ muniṃ dukkhassa pāraguṃ anekākārasampannaṃ payirupāsanti Gotamam.

1251. Thus do they attend upon Gotama endowed with so many virtuous qualities, the sage possessed of all the attributes and gone to the far shore beyond suffering.

XII. Gaggarā

Once when the Buddha was seated by the Gaggarā Lotus-pond near the town of Campā, surrounded by a large assembly, the Venerable Vaṅgīsa composed this verse in his praise:

1252. cando yathā vigatavalāhake nabhe virocati vītamalo va bhānumā evaṃ pi Aṅgīrasa tvaṃ mahāmuni atirocasi yasaṃ sabbalokaṃ.

1252. As the moon shines in the sky free from clouds, as also the spotless sun, even so, Resplendent One, Great Sage, do you outshine the whole world with your fame.

XIII. Vaṅgīsa (1)

This, the Venerable Vaṅgīsa's "autobiographical" poem, was composed shortly after he attained arahatship:

1253. kāveyyamattā vicarimha⁵⁸ pubbe gāmā gāmaṃ purā puram ath' addasāma sambuddhaṃ sabbadhammāna pāraguṃ.

1253. Intoxicated with skill in the poetic art, formerly we wandered from village to village, from town to town. Then we saw the Awakened One gone to the far shore beyond all (worldly conditioned) phenomena.

1254. so me dhammam adesesi muni dukkhassa pāragū dhammaṃ sutvā pasīdimha saddhā no udapajjatha.

1254. The sage gone to the far shore beyond suffering taught me the Dhamma. On hearing the Dhamma we gained confidence in him; faith arose in us.

1255. tassāhaṃ vacanaṃ sutvā khandhe āyatanāni ca dhātuyo ca viditvāna pabbajiṃ anagāriyaṃ.

1255. Having heard his word and learnt of the aggregates, bases, and elements, I went forth into homelessness.

1256. bahūnaṃ vata atthāya uppajjanti tathāgatā itthīnaṃ purisānañ ca ye te sāsanakārakā.

1256. Indeed Tathāgatas appear for the good of the many men and women who practise their teaching.

1257. tesaṃ kho vata atthāya bodhiṃ ajjhagamā muni bhikkhūnaṃ bhikkhunīnañ ca ye niyāmagataaddasā.

⁵⁷Elsewhere Moggallāna, the chief disciple noted for his supernormal powers (iddhi), is shown as reading the minds of others. At Ud 5.5 he identifies an evil-minded person and ejects him from the assembly. Here he examines the minds of these monks to determine their level of attainment and discovers they are all arahats.

⁵⁸The plural verb is consistent with vicarimha in (a) and is supported by Th-a (text and lemma), Be, and S.

1257. Indeed the sage attained enlightenment for the good of those monks and nuns who see the course to be undergone.⁵⁹

1258. *sudesitā cakkhumatā buddhenādiccabandhunā
cattāri ariyasaccāni anukampāya pāṇinaṃ.*

1258. Well taught are the Four Noble Truths by the Seeing One, the Awakened One, the Kinsman of the Sun, out of compassion for living beings.

1259. dukkhaṃ dukkhasamuppādaṃ dukkhassa ca atikkamaṃ ariyañ c'atthaṅgikaṃ⁶⁰ maggaṃ dukkhūpasamagāminaṃ.

1259. Suffering, the origin of suffering, the overcoming of suffering, and the noble eightfold path leading to the allaying of suffering.

1260. evam ete tathā vuttā diṭṭhā me te yathātathā sadattho me anuppatto kataṃ buddhassa sāsanaṃ.

1260. Thus these things, thus spoken of, have been seen by me as they really are. The true goal has been reached by me; the Awakened One's instruction has been done.

1261. *svāgataṃ vata me āsi mama buddhassa santike
saṃvibhattesu dhammesu yaṃ seṭṭhaṃ tad upāgamiṃ.*

1261. It was good indeed for me, my coming into the presence of the Awakened One. Among things shared out I obtained the best.

1262. *abhiññāpāramipatto sotadhātuvisodhito
tevijjo iddhippatto'mhi cetopariyakovido.*

1262. I have attained the perfection of the direct knowledges, I have purified the element of hearing, I have the threefold knowledge and obtained supernormal powers and am skilled in knowing the minds of others.

XIV. Vaṅgīsa (2)

The shorter version of the previous poem (at S I 196):

1. kāveyyamattā vicarimha pubbe gāmā gāmaṃ purā puraṃ ath' addasāma sambuddhaṃ saddhā no udapajjatha.

1. Intoxicated with skill in the poetic art, formerly we wandered from village to village, from town to town. Then we saw the Awakened One and faith arose in us.

2. *so me dhammam adesesi khandhe āyatānāni dhātuyo ca
tassāhaṃ dhammaṃ sutvāna pabbajiṃ anagāriyaṃ.*

2. He taught me the Dhamma concerning the aggregates, bases, and elements. Having heard his Dhamma, I went forth into homelessness.

3. bahunnam vata atthāya bodhim ajjhagamā muni bhikkhūnaṃ bhikkhunīnañ ca ye niyāmagataddasā.

3. Indeed the sage attained enlightenment for the good of the many monks and nuns who see the course to be undergone.

4. *svāgataṃ vata me āsi mama buddhassa santike
tisso vijjā anuppattā kataṃ buddhassa sāsanaṃ.*

⁵⁹Niyāma = the noble path.

⁶⁰Ee reads ariyaṅgikaṃ, but the reading I adopt is found in Be and tends to prevail in the tradition (see DhP 191).

4. It was good indeed for me, my coming into the presence of the Awakened One. The three knowledges have been attained; the Awakened One's instruction has been done.

5. pubbenivāsaṃ jānāmi dibbacakkhuṃ visodhitaṃ tevijjo iddhipatto'mhi cetopariyāyakovido.

5. I know my former abodes, (I possess) the purified divine eye, I have the threefold knowledge and obtained supernormal powers and am skilled in knowing the minds of others.

XV. Nigrodhakappa

In this, the longest of the poems, the Venerable Vaṅḡisa asks the Buddha whether his deceased preceptor, the Elder Nigrodhakappa, had attained final nibbāna. This provides an opportunity for Vaṅḡisa to sing the praises of the Buddha himself:

1263. pucchāmi satthāram anomapaññaṃ diṭṭh'eva dhamme yo vicikicchānaṃ chettā Aggālave kālam akāsi bhikkhu ñāto yasassī abhinibbutatto.

1263. "I ask the teacher of superior wisdom, one who in this very life is the cutter-off of doubts: The monk, well known and famous, who has died at Aggālava, was he completely quenched in mind?

1264. Nigrodhakappo iti tassa nāmaṃ tayā kataṃ bhagavā brāhmaṇassa so taṃ namassam acari mutyapekho āraddhaviriyo da-hadhammadassī.

1264. "Nigrodhakappa was the name given to that brahmin by you, Fortunate One. Looking for release, strenuously energetic, he went about revering you, O seer of the secure state (i.e. Nibbāna).

1265. taṃ sāvakaṃ Sakka mayam pi sabbe aññātum icchāma samantacakkhu samavaṭṭhitā no savanāya sotā⁶¹ tuvam nu satthā tvam anuttaro'si.

1265. "Sakka, All-seeing One, we all wish to know concerning that disciple. Our ears are ready to hear. You are the teacher, you are unsurpassed.

1266. *chind'eva no vicikicchaṃ brūhi m'etaṃ parinibbutaṃ vedaya bhūripañña majjh'eva no bhāsa samantacakkhu
Sakko va devāna sahasanetto.*

1266. "Sever our doubt. Tell me this, you of extensive wisdom, that he experienced quenching. Speak in our very midst, All-seeing One, like the thousand-eyed Sakka in the midst of the gods.

1267. ye keci ganthā⁶² idha mohamaggā aññānapakkhā vicikicchaṭṭhānā tathāgataṃ patvā na te bhavanti cakkhuṃ hi etaṃ paramaṃ narānaṃ.

1267. "Whatever bonds exist here (in the world), ways of delusion, on the side of ignorance, bases for doubt, they no longer exist on reaching the Tathāgata, for that vision of his is supreme among men.

⁶¹I read sotā with Th-a (text and lemma), Be, and Sn 345. A plural is needed to agree with samavaṭṭhitā. Norman suggests that sotaṃ may be an example of the change -aṃ < -āni.

⁶²*ganthā* should be adopted in place of Ee's gandhā.

1268. *no ce hi jātu puriso kilese vāto yathā abbhaghanaṃ vihāne tamo'v'assa nivuto sabbaloko
na jotimanto pi narā tapeyyuṃ.*⁶³

1268. "If no man were ever to disperse the defilements as the wind disperses a mass of clouds, the whole world, enveloped, would surely be darkness, and even illustrious men would not shine forth.

1269. *dhīrā ca pajjotakarā bhavanti taṃ taṃ ahaṃ dhīra tath'eva maññe vipassinaṃ jānam upāgamimha parisāsu*⁶⁴ no āvikarohi Kappaṃ.

1269. "But the wise are light-makers. O Wise One, I think you are just such a one. We have come upon him who knows and is gifted with insight. Make evident to us, within the companies (of disciples), the fate of Kappa.

1270. *khippaṃ giraṃ eraya vaggu vagguṃ haṃso va paggayha sanikaṃ nikūja*⁶⁵
bindussarena suvikappitena sabb'eva te ujjugatā suṇoma.

1270. "Quickly enunciate your beautiful utterance, O beautiful one! Like a goose stretching forth (its neck), honk gently with your melodious and well-modulated voice; we are all listening to you attentively.

1271. pahīnajātīmaraṇaṃ asesam niggayha dhonaṃ vadessāmi dhammaṃ na kāmakāro hi puthujjanānaṃ saṃkheyyakāro'va tathāgatānaṃ.

1271. "Pressing the one who has completely abandoned birth and death, I shall urge the purified one to speak Dhamma. For among outsiders there is no acting as they wish, but among Tathāgatas there is acting with discretion."⁶⁶

1272. *sampannavēyyākaraṇaṃ tavedaṃ samujjupaññassa*⁶⁷ samuggahītaṃ ayam añjali pacchimo suppaṇāmito mā mohayi jānam anomapañña.

1272. "This full explanation of yours, (coming from) one with upright wisdom, is well learnt. This last salutation is proffered. You of superior wisdom, knowing (Kappa's fate), do not keep us in ignorance.

1273. *parovaram*⁶⁸ ariyadhammaṃ viditvā mā mohayi jānam anomaviriya vāriṃ yathā ghammanighammatatto vācābhikaṅkhāmi sutam pavassa.

⁶³The reading of (d) follows Sn 348.

⁶⁴I follow Th-a (text and lemma), Be, and Sn 349 in reading parisāsu for Ee's parisāya.

⁶⁵Be with support of Th-a, and Sn 350, read nikūja in place of Ee's nikūjam. Norman does not comment on the variant, but it seems this should be adopted.

⁶⁶The second part of the verse is obscure. Th-a explains: "Among outsiders (puthujjana), trainees (sekha), and arahat disciples there is no ability to do whatever they wish; they cannot know or speak whatever they want. But the Tathāgatas act with discretion; their actions are preceded by wisdom. The point is that they can know or speak whatever they want."

⁶⁷Th-a (text and lemma), Be, and Sn 352 read samujju-, which should be adopted.

⁶⁸Th-a (text and lemma) and Be read paroparam, but Sn 353 agrees with Ee in reading parovaram.

1273. “Having known the noble Dhamma in its full extent, you of superior energy, knowing (Kappa’s fate), do not keep us in ignorance. I long for your word as one overcome by heat in the hot season longs for water. Rain down on our ears.”⁶⁹

1274. yadatthiyaṃ brahmacariyaṃ acāri
Kappāyano kacci ’ssa taṃ amoghaṃ
nibbāyi so ādu saupādiseso yathā vimutto ahu taṃ suṇoma.

1274. “Surely the purpose for which Kappāyana practised the holy life was not in vain. Was he quenched or had he a residue remaining?⁷⁰ Let us hear in what way he was released.”

1275. acchecchi taṇhaṃ idha nāmarūpe
taṇhāya sotaṃ dīgharattānusayitaṃ atāri jātīmaraṇaṃ asesam icc abravī bhagavā pañcasetṭho.

1275. “He cut off craving here for mind-and-materiality”, said the Fortunate One, “the stream of craving which for a long time had lain latent within him. He has crossed beyond birth and death completely.” So spoke the Fortunate One, the foremost of the five.⁷¹

1276. esa sutvā pasīdāmi vaco te isisattama
amoghaṃ kira me puṭṭhaṃ na maṃ vañcesi brāhmaṇo.

1276. “On hearing your word, O best of seers, I believe. My question was truly not in vain; the brahmin did not deceive me.

1277. yathāvādī tathākārī ahū buddhassa sāvako
acchecchi Maccuno jālaṃ tataṃ māyāvino dalhaṃ.

1277. “As he spoke, so he acted. He was a disciple of the Awakened One. He cut through the strong, spread-out net of Death the deceiver.

1278. addasa bhagavā ādiṃ upādānassa Kappiyo
accagā vata Kappāyano maccudheyyaṃ suduttaraṃ.

1278. “Kappiyo saw the starting point of grasping, O Fortunate One. Kappāyana has certainly gone beyond the realm of Death, so difficult to cross.

1279. taṃ devadevaṃ vandāmi puttaṃ te dvīpaduttama
anujātaṃ mahāvīraṃ nāgaṃ nāgassa orasaṃ.

1279. “I pay homage to you, the god of gods,⁷² and to your son, O best of bipeds, to the great hero born in your tracks, a nāga, a true son of the nāga.”⁷³

⁶⁹I follow Norman’s suggestion that sutaṃ here is a metrical adaptation for sotaṃ, ear. Th-a explains it as equivalent to sadda, the sound (of your voice). See EV I, pp.298–99.

⁷⁰Norman has misunderstood this verse (at EV I, p.116). The distinction the poet is making is not between the nibbāna element with residue (saupādisesa) and the nibbāna without residue (anupādisesa), i.e. nibbāna during life and after death; for Nigrodhakappa is already dead. The question is: Did he die with a residue of defilements (as a non-returner) or without a residue of defilements (as an arahat). See the use of saupādisesa at M I 62–63.

⁷¹The Buddha is regarded as the foremost, that is, the chief or leader and teacher of the group of five monks who heard the First Sermon. Th-a gives other explanations of the word, i.e. “controller of the five senses.”

⁷²The highest amongst those classified as devas or “gods”—by birth (heavenly beings), convention (kings), and attainment (arahats).

⁷³On nāga, see Introduction, p.5. This final verse is not found in the Sn version and the entire poem is omitted from the Saṃyutta.

Appendix

I. Non-Canonical Verses of Vaṅgīsa

The Theragāthā, with the Vaṅgīsa-saṃyutta and the Suttanipāta, does not exhaust the verses ascribed to the Venerable Vaṅgīsa. Another pair of verses is attributed to him in the post-canonical Milindapañha, “The Questions of King Milinda” (p.390):

Yathā pi suriyo udayanto rūpaṃ dasseti pāṇinaṃ suciṅ ca asuciṅ cāpi kalyāṇaṅ cāpi pāpakaṃ tathā bhikkhu dhammadharo avijjāpīhitaṃ janaṃ pathaṃ dasseti vivīdhaṃ ādicco v’udayaṃ yathā ti.

Just as the sun rising in the sky shows shapes to creatures,
What is pure and what is impure, what is good and bad,
So the monk knowing Dhamma shows the path in various ways
To people cloaked in ignorance, as does the rising sun.

This work also contains verses ascribed to other elders, such as Sāriputta and Anuruddha, that are not to be found elsewhere. The Milindapañha records a dialogue between the Elder Nāgasena and King Milinda, the Indic form of the Greek name Menander. He is identified with a Greco-Bactrian king of the 2nd century B.C. who exercised rule in Northwest India. The work was probably composed originally in Prakrit or Sanskrit—even Greek has been suggested—and was subsequently translated into Pali. It is therefore possible that these verses came from the Tipiṭaka of another Buddhist school, possibly the Sarvāstivāda.

There are also some verses extolling the virtues of the Buddha attributed to Vaṅgīsa (or Vāgīsa) in the Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit work the Mahāvastu, which formed part of the Vinaya of the Lokuttaravādin school.⁷⁴ Among these is the following (p.130):

As the glorious sun shines in the sky, and the full moon when the sky is clear, so dost thou, O Man, firm in concentration, shine forth like burnished gold.

This is reminiscent of Th 1252. Then we find (p.131):

Since through thine own understanding, thou has apprehended the truth and knowledge unheard of before, O Foremost Man, who shinest like thousand-eyed Maghavan,⁷⁵ pray give utterance to it.

This may be compared with Th 1266. In the Mahāvastu itself the words, “pray give utterance to it,” have no obvious connection with what has gone before or what follows, but they do have a significance in the Theragāthā context, where the poet questions the Buddha about the fate of Nigrodhakappa.

Another reference to Vaṅgīsa is found in the Mahāvastu when the Buddha addresses him thus, “Let there come to your mind, Vāgīsa, the recollection of a former association of yours with the Tathāgata.” Vāgīsa then proceeds to tell in verse a story of a former life when the bodhisattva or Buddha-to-be, as a wise brahmin, was his teacher (pp.222f.).

II. Vaṅgīsa and the Vimānavatthu

The Vimānavatthu of the Khuddaka Nikāya is a collection of 83 stories in verse describing the vimāna—a kind of personal heavenly mansion—inhabited by beings reborn as gods or goddesses (devatā) as ⁷⁴The Mahāvastu, trans. by J.J. Jones, Vol. I (PTS 1949). Page references are to this translation.

⁷⁵Another name for Sakka, the ruler of the gods.

a reward for meritorious deeds performed by them as human beings. All the stories follow a similar pattern. They begin with an introductory verse (or verses) in which the god or goddess is asked about the cause for his or her rebirth with that particular mansion. The deva thereupon relates his or her previous good deeds.

Usually the Venerable Mahāmogallāna is the questioner, but occasionally another elder plays this role. Generally, it is only in the commentary that the questioner is named and the background supplied; otherwise the verses are anonymous. In four stories Vaṅḡisa is identified as the interlocutor: No. 16 (Sirimāvimāna), No. 35 (Sesavatīvimāna), No. 41 (Nāgavimāna), and No. 61 (another Nāgavimāna). In No. 37 (Visālakkhivimāna) it is Sakka the ruler of the gods who questions the goddess. However, at the conclusion the commentary states that Sakka related it to Vaṅḡisa, who in turn told it to the compilers of the Canon.

We cannot be certain whether the ascription of these verses to Vaṅḡisa is authentic. There is nothing notable in the verses of the two Nāga mansion stories that can link them to the poet. If Vaṅḡisa did recite the verses of No. 37, although allegedly receiving them from Sakka, could they be regarded as his own composition? The introductory verses of Sesavatī are, interestingly enough, unique in the Vimānavatthu as constituting a seven-verse descriptive poem in its own right. There is none other comparable to it in length, and as it is ascribed to Vaṅḡisa, a translation of it is appended here. However, it is the Sirimā poem that is the most interesting of all the mansion stories, for it has a doctrinal content lacking elsewhere in the work. In it Sirimā describes how she became a disciple of the Buddha and a sotāpanna, one who has entered the stream leading to final emancipation. A translation of it is therefore presented as possibly a poetical work of Vaṅḡisa.

Sesavatī's Mansion

(Vaṅḡisa:)

“I see this delightful and beautiful mansion, its surface of many a colour, ablaze with crystal and roofed with silver and gold. A well-proportioned palace, possessing gateways, and strewn with golden sand.

As the thousand-rayed sun in the autumn shines in the sky in the ten directions, dispelling the dark, so does this your mansion glow, like a blazing smoke-crested fire in the darkness of the night.

It dazzles the eye like lightning, beautiful, suspended in space. Resounding with the music of lute, drum, and cymbals, this mansion of yours rivals Indra's city in glory.

White and red and blue lotuses, jasmine, and other flowers are there; blossoming sal trees and flowering asokas, and the air is filled with a variety of fragrances.

Sweet-scented trees, breadfruits, laden branches interlaced, with palm trees and hanging creepers in full bloom, glorious like jewelled nets; also a delightful lotus pool exists for you.

Whatever flowering plants there are that grow in water, and trees that are on land, those known in the human world and heavens, all exist in your abode.

Of what calming and self-restraint is this the result? By the fruit of what deed have you arisen here? How did this mansion come to be possessed by you? Tell it in full, O lady with thick eyelashes.”

(Sesavatī:)

“How it come to be possessed by me, this mansion with its flocks of herons, peacocks, and partridges; and frequented by heavenly water-fowl and royal geese; resounding with the cries of birds, of ducks and cuckoos;

containing divers varieties of creepers, flowers and trees; with trumpet-flower, rose-apple, and asoka trees—now how this mansion came to be possessed by me, I will tell you. Listen, venerable sir.

In the eastern region of the excellent country of Magadha there is a village called Nālaka, venerable sir. There I lived formerly as a daughter-in-law and they knew me there as Sesavatī.

Scattering flower-blossoms joyfully I honoured him skilled in deeds and worshipped by gods and men, the great Upatissa⁷⁶ who has attained the immeasurable quenching.

Having worshipped him gone to the ultimate bourn, the eminent seer bearing his last body, on leaving my human shape I came to (the heaven of) the thirty (-three) and inhabit this place.”

Vv. 642–53

Sirimā's Mansion

(Vaṅgīsa:)

“Your yoked and finely caparisoned horses, strong and swift, are heading downward through the sky. And these five hundred chariots, magically created, are following, the horses urged on by charioteers.

You stand in this excellent chariot, adorned, radiant and shining, like a blazing star. I ask you of lovely slender form and exquisite beauty, from which company of gods have you come to visit the Unrivalled One?”

(Sirimā)

“From those who have reached the heights of sensual pleasures, said to be unsurpassed; the gods who delight in magical transformation and creation. A nymph from that company able to assume any desired appearance has come here to worship the Unrivalled One.”

(Vaṅgīsa:)

“What good conduct did you formerly practise here? How is it that you live in immeasurable glory and have gained such pleasures? Due to what have you acquired the unrivalled power to travel through the sky? Why does your beauty radiate in the ten directions?

You are surrounded and honoured by the gods. From where did you de cease before you came to a heavenly bourn, goddess? Or of what teaching were you able to follow the word of instruction? Tell me if you were a disciple of the Awakened One.”

(Sirimā)

“In a fine well-built city situated between hills, an attendant of a noble king endowed with good fortune, I was highly accomplished in dancing and singing. As Sirimā I was known in Rājagaha.

But then the Awakened One, the leader among seers, the guide, taught me of origination, of suffering and impermanence; of the unconditioned, of the cessation of suffering that is everlasting; and of this path, not crooked, straight, auspicious.

When I had learnt of the undying state (nibbāna), the unconditioned, through the instruction of the Tathāgata, the Unrivalled One, I was highly and well restrained in the precepts and established in the Dhamma taught by the most excellent of men, the Awakened One.

When I knew the undefiled place, the unconditioned, taught by the Tathāgata, the Unrivalled One, I then and there experienced the calm concentration (of the noble path). That supreme certainty of release was mine.

When I gained the distinctive undying, assured, eminent in penetrative insight, not doubting, I was revered by many people and experienced much pleasure and enjoyment.

⁷⁶The personal name of Sāriputta, who is said to have come originally from Nālaka.

Thus I am a goddess, knowing the undying, a disciple of the Tathāgata, the Unrivalled One; a knower of Dhamma established in the first fruit, a stream-enterer. Henceforth there is no bad bourn for me.

I came to revere the Unrivalled One and the virtuous monks who delight in what is skilled; to worship the auspicious assembly of ascetics and the respectable Fortunate One, the Dhamma-king.

I am joyful and gladdened on seeing the sage, the Tathāgata, the outstanding trainer of men capable of being trained, who has cut off craving, who delights in what is skilled, the guide. I worship the supremely merciful Compassionate One.”

Vv. 137–49

The Buddhist Publication Society

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for all people.

Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is—a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose.

For more information about the BPS and our publications, please visit our website, or contact:

The Administrative Secretary
Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54 Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
E-mail: bps@bps.lk
Web site: <http://www.bps.lk>
Tel: 0094 81 223 7283
Fax: 0094 81 222 3679